Island Health's Division of Midwifery has an opportunity for a Registered Midwife at the North Island, Campbell River Hospital to serve the geographic region of Campbell River. The position will also contribute to the growth of our connected service with Port Hardy/Port McNeil midwifery, and ongoing building of culturally safe relationships with local Indigenous communities.

North Island, Campbell River Hospital has 7 LDRP rooms within their Perinatal Unit and provides services to a referral population of approximately 40,000. This unit sees 400 deliveries per year with RMs involved in approximately 40% of these births.

The successful applicant will be eligible to obtain full licensure with the B.C. College of Midwives and demonstrate suitable experience and training.

Midwives in B.C. are required to practice in both the home and hospital settings. They are independent practitioners with their own practices in the community and will have admitting privileges at NI, Campbell River Hospital.

This is a new position.

Start Date

As soon as possible

Community Information

The beautiful oceanfront city of Campbell River, population 40,000, is located at mid-point on Vancouver Island's east coast. The surrounding waters of Discovery Passage, and adjacent numerous lakes and rivers, offer an idyllic setting for outdoor enthusiasts.

The Campbell River municipal airport is a mere 10 minutes from the heart of downtown and is a busy hub of activity. Regular daily flights from Vancouver bring business and vacation travelers while charter flights transport supplies and people to a myriad of northern communities and activities.
